

Jackman Eye Institute would like to welcome
Dr. Harry Dang to our practice.

Dr. Harry Dang was born and raised in Markham, Ontario, and earned his Bachelor of Science (BSc) degree at the University of Toronto. He graduated at the top of his class, placed in the 99th percentile on the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT), and entered medical school a year ahead of his peers.

He earned his Doctor of Medicine (MD) degree from the University of Ottawa Faculty of Medicine. While in medical school, Dr. Dang ranked 1st in his class in Ophthalmology, earning him the Clinician Competency Award. He also received several prestigious awards and honors, including the Eye Foundation of Canada National Scholarship, the Dr. T. Fejer Ophthalmology Award, and the Health Advocate Award for his exceptional compassion towards patients.

He subsequently moved to the beautiful Canadian East Coast and graduated from Dalhousie University after completing 5 years of Ophthalmology residency training. He is a Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada (FRCSC) and a member of the Canadian Ophthalmological Society and the American Academy of Ophthalmology.

Dr. Dang is known for his compassionate, approachable, and friendly demeanor, and is eager to build collaborative relationships with local optometrists and other healthcare professionals. His goal is to foster a comprehensive and empathetic approach to eye health in the region.

Please feel free to fax referrals for Dr. Dang to 709-576-7677 or email them to referrals@jackmaneye.com and we'll be happy to book an appointment for your patients.
